QUAGGA MUSSEL VELIGERS IN GREEN MOUNTAIN RESERVOIR

ALERT: Quagga Mussel veligers have been identified in Green Mountain Reservoir.

If you've boated on Green Mountain Reservoir, your boat must be inspected and most likely decontaminated before launching in any other water.

CPW's main objective is to protect the state's water and wildlife resources, while creating a great environment for recreation.

PLEASE take the following steps to help meet that goal:

CLEAN—remove plants and mud from watercraft and all equipment every time you launch

DRAIN—drain all water from compartments and engines. Remove all drain plugs after boating and keep plugs out during overland transport.

DRY—make sure your boat is completely dry between uses

REMINDER: If you have boated outside of Colorado you must have your boat inspected before launching in Colorado.

We need your help keeping Colorado's waters safe and clear of invasive species!
